Short description:

At the end of 2009, the European Commission released a communication on public-private partnerships (PPPs). In this context, it declared that it would support the financing of PPPs by introducing new financial engineering instruments. It also indicated that it was looking for ways to make the combination of EU grants and PPP structures more attractive and accessible. This EPEC report presents the instruments currently available for combining PPPs with EU Funds and it highlights the main challenges involved in blending and offers conclusions.
